Promoting insightful content on LinkedIn gives prospective students a taste of business school—resulting in increased leads, awareness, and enthusiasm for their programs

“LinkedIn has helped generate excitement and enthusiasm around our thought leadership, which reflects positively on our faculty and students. What’s more, we know who’s sharing and commenting—they’re leading professionals—exactly who we want to target.”

Neil Bearse
Director of Marketing
Queen’s School of Business

Showcasing conversations and thought leadership

As one of the world’s premier business schools, Queen’s School of Business uses business insights to demonstrate the type of discussion and thought leadership that happens in their classrooms—taking a more content-driven approach to driving leads and awareness for their degree programs.

“Instead of simply promoting a list of bullet points about our program, we wanted to showcase the conversations that happen in our classrooms,” says Neil Bearse, director of marketing for Queen’s School of Business. “And bringing insights content to places where more people can see it and share it is part of that same goal.”

Challenge

- Raise awareness of QSB Insight, the school’s thought leadership platform
- Increase attendance at Executive Education faculty webinars
- Gain leads for Executive Education program

Solution

- Use Sponsored Content to promote QSB Insight website, as well as upcoming webinars
- Use Sponsored InMail to drive attendance for information sessions on degree programs

Results

- 300% increase in traffic to QSB Insight
- 60% increase in webinar attendance
- 450 leads for Executive M.B.A. program
Increasing traffic, leads, and engagement—
from a high-quality audience

Sponsored Content has increased traffic to the School’s QSB Insight website by 300 percent, with heavy sharing and high-quality comments. “A recent QSB Insight post on inspiring business leaders was shared more than 600 times via LinkedIn,” said Bearse. “Regardless of the type of content we post, from videos to whitepapers to webinar invitations, the conversation never falls apart and there is no need to moderate. LinkedIn is the most effective digital channel for our content.”

Sponsored Content also boosted attendance at Executive Education faculty webinars by 60 percent, while the InMail campaign drew 450 quality leads from the School’s information sessions.

“LinkedIn is the perfect accelerator for great content, which helps us become more influential and change the way people think—while generating excitement about our programs both internally and externally,” Bearse says.

Targeting messages to professionals and prospective students

“We were using email marketing to promote our research and webinars to our alumni list,” Bearse says. “But we wanted to reach new people beyond our alumni and their colleagues.”

To drive attendance at monthly webinars and information sessions for their EMBA and Executive Education programs, Queen’s School of Business used Sponsored Content and InMails targeted by seniority, education level, geography, and company size.

“Targeting both Sponsored Content and InMail to the right audiences was easy, because LinkedIn speaks about target segments the same way we do,” Bearse says. “There’s an actual checkbox for the people we want to reach—we don’t have to simply go on faith.”

Bearse added, “Also, the LinkedIn customer service is top notch. They don’t just quickly respond to any questions, they proactively suggest optimization and future campaign ideas.”

Visit marketing.linkedin.com to learn how other marketers have successfully met their marketing objectives.