The Demand Generation Marketer's Guide to LinkedIn Marketing Solutions

You're a B2B marketer who lives in a world governed by leads, conversions, and direct response. And while your success is measured by bottom-funnel metrics, you know building and cultivating prospect and customer relationships is a full-funnel endeavor.

It's your job to create and nurture measurable, actionable interest in your brand, product or service — all while lowering your cost per lead and increasing your company's return on investment — across channels. That's a tall order. Especially when you consider today's dynamic digital landscape and the way the buyers' journey has changed and continues to evolve.

The fact is you've never had greater responsibility or a more visible impact on your company's bottom line. So let's get started.

What Does the World of B2B Demand Generation Look Like Today?

With the advent of the digital age, there have never been more channels for creating demand. However, getting in front of the right people at the right time remains a challenge. Consider these sobering facts:

How can you succeed when the deck is so clearly stacked against you? Think about it. If only 5 percent<sup>1</sup> of visitors to your site fill out a form and only 20 percent<sup>2</sup> (on a very good day) open your emails, you can only hope to convert a modest 1 percent. That's not enough to sustain a growing sales pipeline or meet expanding revenue targets. When you consider these dire statistics, you have to move beyond the inbox if you want to reach and actually engage more of the right people.

What's more, when it comes to traditional nurturing strategies, it's not just email that falls short. Other bottom-funnel channels like SEO and SEM also have very limited reach. With search, you only reach people who are actively seeking a solution right now. With email, you're limited to who is in your database or in a finite amount of external email lists. In either case, you'll eventually hit a wall because you won't be able to reach more new audiences. In order to drive more conversions at the bottom of the funnel, you need to invest in top-funnel activities that will reach more of the right people.

And, we know that prospects are hungry for information. According to a recent Google study, today's consumer consults an average of 10.4 sources before they decide to purchase.<sup>3</sup> And according to an oft-cited Forrester report, in many cases the B2B buyer's journey is 90 percent complete by the time he or she reaches out to your sales department.<sup>4</sup> So the real challenge is reaching your ideal prospects with the relevant content they crave at precisely the right time. Talk about a tall order. Of course, with challenges also come tremendous opportunities.

It's Time to Rethink Demand Generation

The buyer may be in the driver's seat, but there's still a lot you can do to steer the conversation in the right direction. You have to evolve your strategies if you want to effectively reach, engage, and ultimately convert today's research-savvy prospects.

Use Top-Funnel Activities to Drive More Bottom-Funnel Conversions

The buyer's journey isn't linear, so it's important to create demand at every stage of the funnel. That's why today's savvy demand generation marketers are embracing top-funnel activities including broadly targeted display and social advertising to seed early demand. Getting in front of the right prospects early and often enables you to generate awareness, drive traffic, build trust, and effectively nudge your prospects from one stage of the funnel to the next until they convert. And with marketing automation technology, it's never been easier to reach and engage your high-value prospects wherever they travel on the web with relevant ads and content.

Did You Know...

You can keep your brand top of mind with prospects on and off LinkedIn using LinkedIn Display Advertising. We offer two ways to target just the right people to increase awareness and engagement with your brand and subsequently drive more prospects into your funnel. Onsite Display reaches members when they're on LinkedIn and Network Display gets your message in front of them wherever they travel online.

Tap into the Value of Your Anonymous Website Visitors

Again, where there is challenge there's opportunity. For example, anonymous website visitors represent a HUGE opportunity that too many demand generation marketers are missing. People who choose to visit your website are warm leads who are interested in your brand, and you know a lot more about these anonymous visitors than you may realize.

Did You Know...

By placing a LinkedIn Insight tag on your website and overlaying LinkedIn professional data, you can immediately see the business demographics of who's visiting your site. Once you better understand who your anonymous visitors are, you can identify and target your highest-value audiences based on characteristics like job function and seniority and how they engage with your site.

Tailor Your Messages Based on Who People Are and What They're Interested In

How prospects behave on your website can be a very strong indicator of where they are in the buyer's journey. How often do they visit your site? How long do they stay, and what pages do they view when they're there? Someone who visits your product or pricing page is probably in the evaluation stage of the journey and therefore more sales ready than someone who just visits your home page and then leaves. Use insights like these to customize your content and offers to different segments.

Did You Know...

By tracking online behavior and user demographics, you can deliver waves of synchronized offers to precisely targeted segments and optimize your messaging over time. Using LinkedIn Lead Accelerator, you can nurture these segments by delivering the most relevant display and social advertising to your prospects based on where they are in the funnel and wherever they go online.

Reach Prospects When They Are Most Engaged

The best time to lend a hand is when someone is actively looking for help. You need to go where your B2B prospects spend time online and engage them with material they find useful, interesting, and relevant. To drive the most conversions, you need to engage your audiences when they are most receptive to your message—when they're already liking, commenting on, or sharing similar content from other thought leaders, brands, and news sites they trust.

Did You Know...

You can publish relevant content straight to the feed of any member on the LinkedIn site using LinkedIn Sponsored Updates. That means you can target the audiences that matter most to your business using your own branded content to drive high-value leads. Another way to deliver highly personalized and relevant content to LinkedIn members is by using Sponsored InMail. Sponsored InMail only gets delivered when members are actively engaged on the LinkedIn site. What's more, 100 percent of the messages you send with Sponsored InMail get delivered directly to the Inbox of your target audience, avoiding the bounce-backs and spam blockers you typically experience with traditional email.

Implement a Nurturing Strategy Across Multiple Channels

With marketing automation, you have access to valuable data like business segments and engagement levels that you can use to track your buyer's journey and nurture those warm anonymous leads instead of letting them get away. In fact, why not take everything that you've learned through email nurturing and use it to inform a more robust multi-channel strategy — one that includes nurturing via targeted display and social advertising. The new way for demand generation marketers to reach, engage, and convert is through what we call “always-on nurturing” that targets prospects wherever they travel online.

Did You Know...

According to a recent SiriusDecisions Research Brief, inbound marketing tactics that include strategies like content syndication and targeted display advertising are responsible for driving more than 70 percent of inquiry volume for many organizations.<sup>5</sup> More and more demand generation marketers are turning to traditional top-funnel strategies like these to generate awareness and create demand. And with Lead Accelerator, you now have the ability to engage prospects anywhere online with relevant ads and content, and deliver only the highest-quality leads to sales.
