

Brand and Demand: The Key Principles of Marketing Growth

Singapore Edition

LinkedIn

Marketers traditionally employ brand or demand marketing at different times as part of their growth strategy

Brand Marketing

Creating memorable links between the brand and relevant buying situations to drive long-term growth (e.g. Media, Thought Leadership, Corporate Social Responsibility, Mission/Vision comms, etc.)

Demand Marketing

Creating urgency around specific offerings/services to drive short-term growth. Highly targeted to encourage and excite key audiences to drive demand.

Marketers lean more heavily into demand since near-term impact can be captured, whereas brand takes more time to measure

The inability to see results in the short term is the #1 barrier to brand building

Source: LinkedIn On-Platform B2D Study, 2019

Why is it time for a change?

Investing in brand marketing should grow your business

Stronger
pricing power

Buyers are willing to pay premium prices for well-known brands

Lower acquisition costs

Focused acquisition strategy increases conversion rates and lowers costs

Better
fiscal health

Orgs that invest 50% of budgets in brand see better financial performance

LinkedIn teamed up with the IPA, Les Binet and Peter Field to identify what it really takes to maximise marketing growth

Methodology: 3,702 B2B marketers surveyed across 9 industries

- Technology
- Financial Services
- Professional Services
- Healthcare
- Education
- Automotive
- Travel
- Manufacturing
- Energy

North America

USA, Canada

Latin America

Brazil, Mexico

Europe & Middle East

UK, France, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Spain, Italy, Netherlands

Asia Pacific

India, Australia, New Zealand, Singapore*, Hong Kong, Korea, Japan, Malaysia, Taiwan, China

*Small sample size (<100 responses)

What we found

It takes balance

The five key principles of marketing growth each depend upon brand and demand marketing

Your marketing plan likely reflects 5 key principles of growth

1. Who?

Customers

Non-Customers

It's critical to reach beyond your customer base as marketing only to existing accounts could limit growth

1.

Customers can only spend so much more

2.

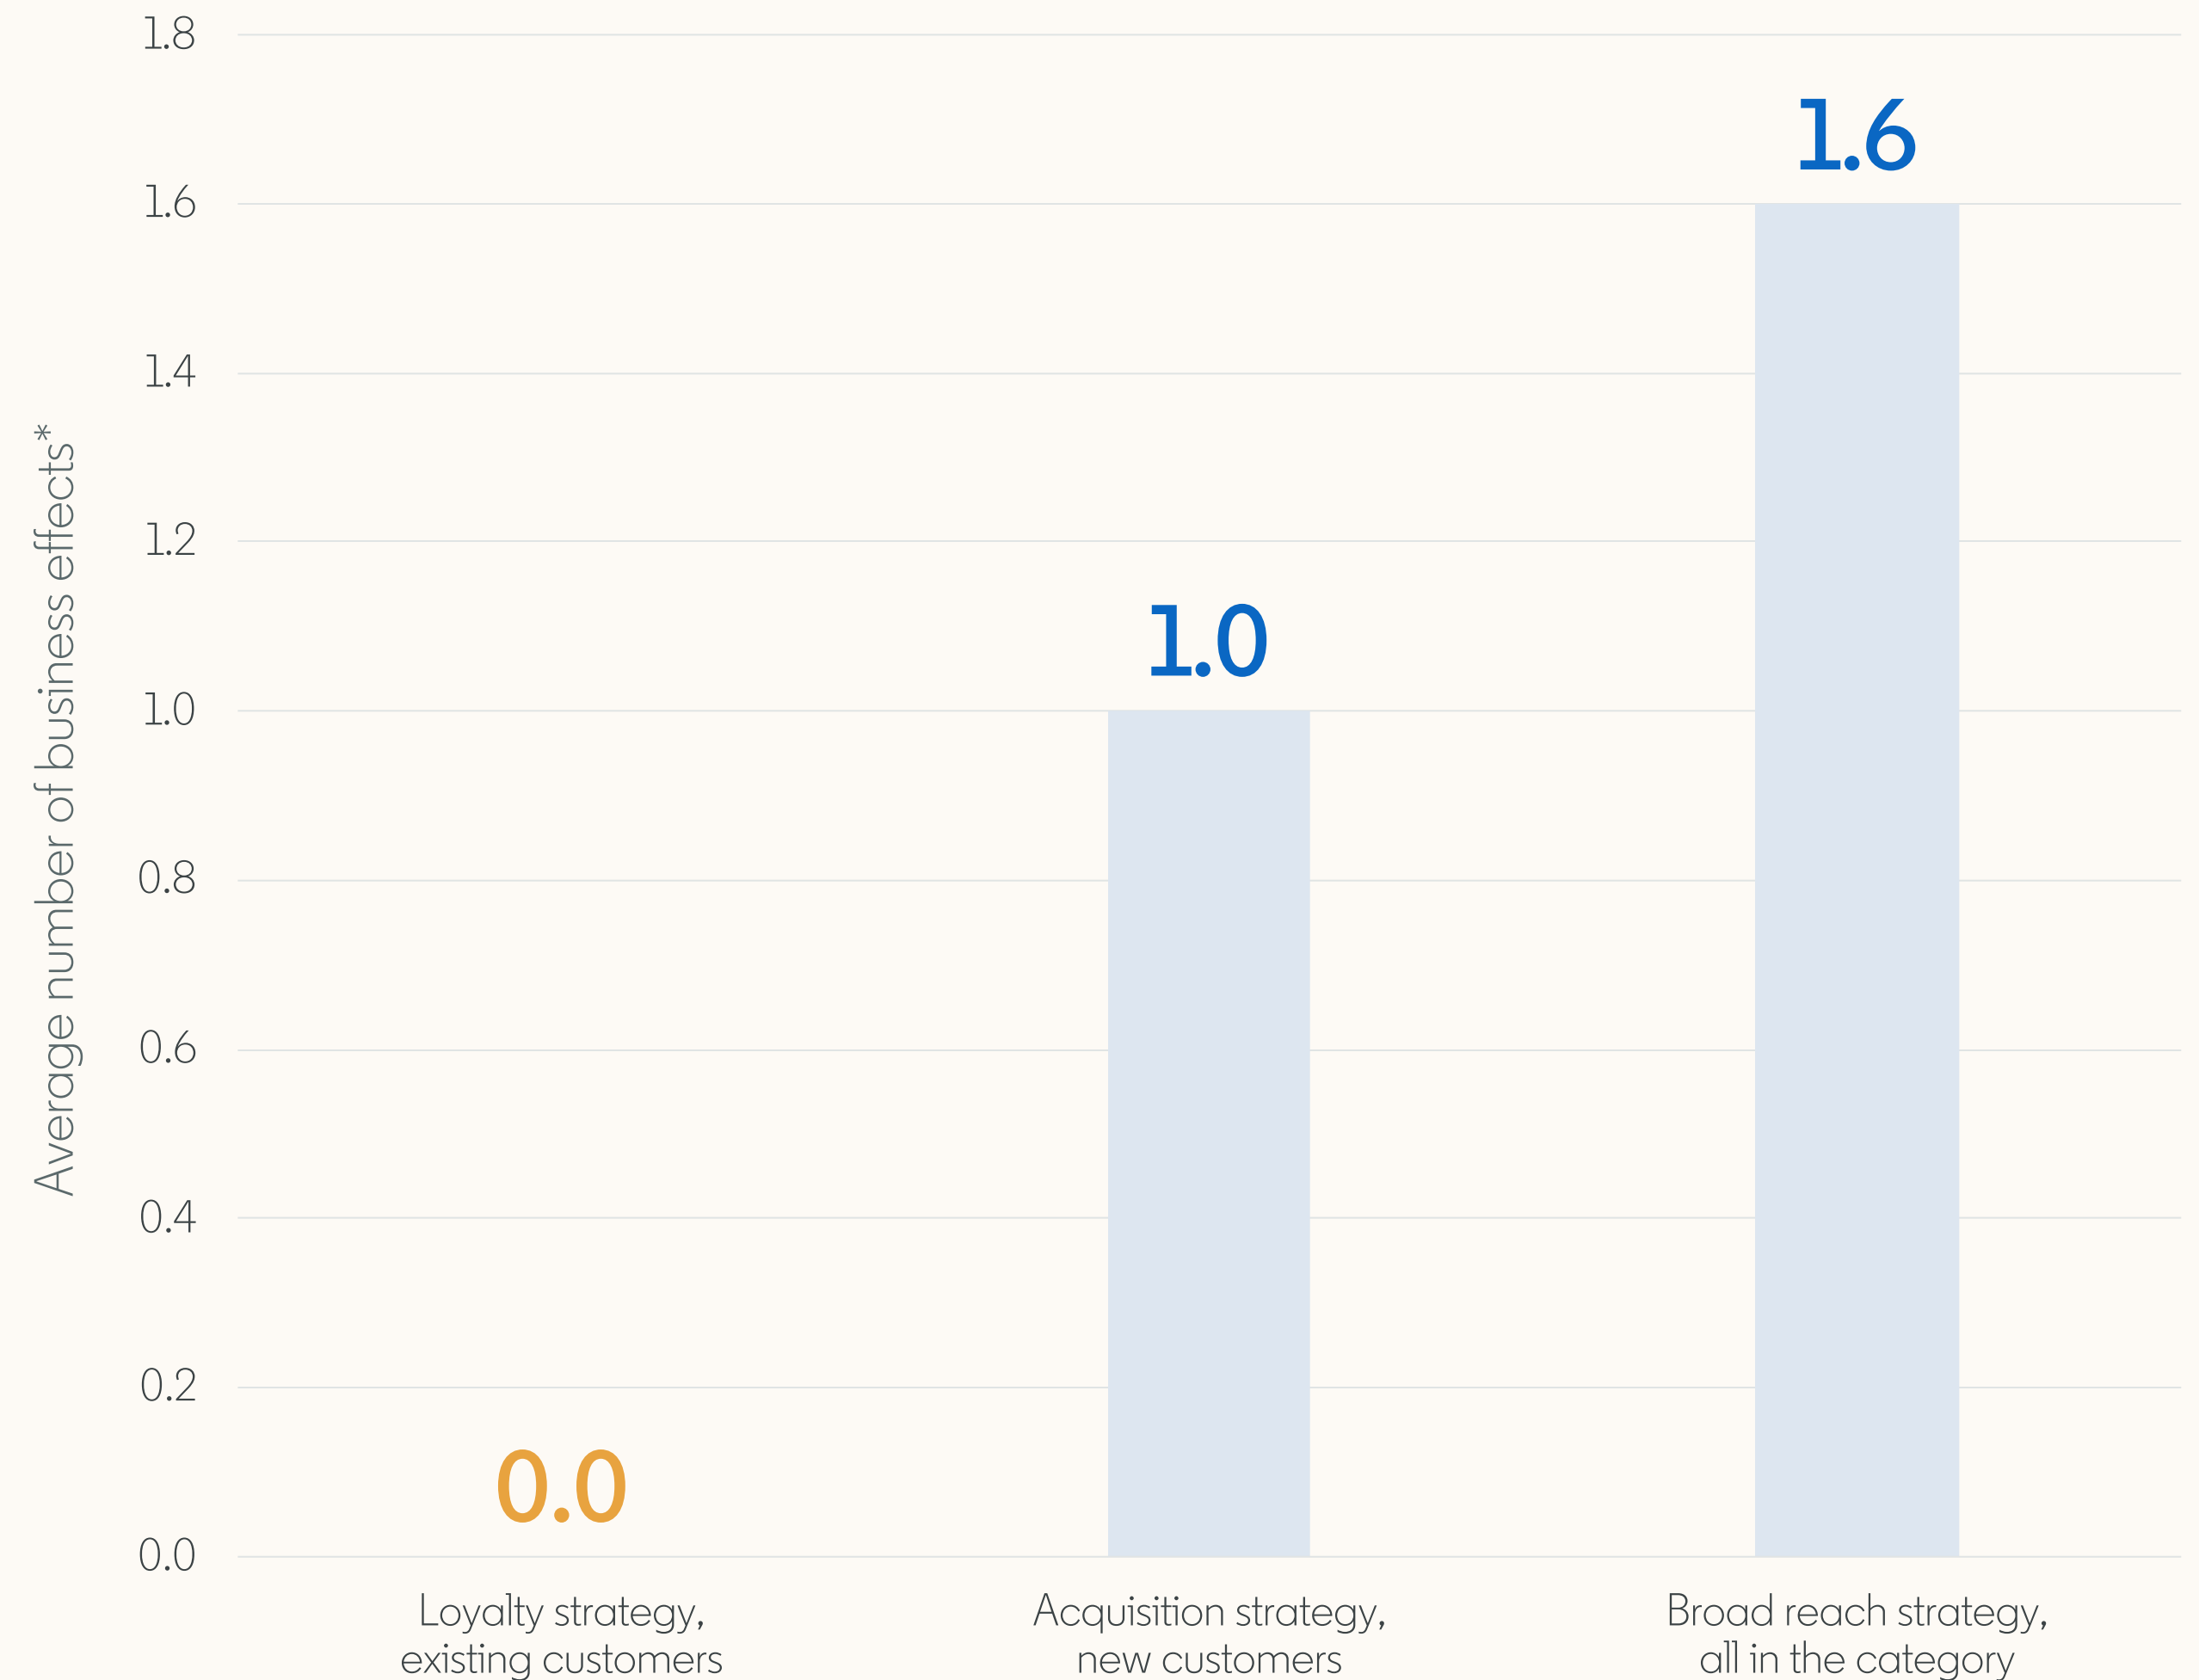

Churn is a natural process out of your control

3.

Product and sales are much more influential

Targeting existing and new customers together will drive a faster and more insulated growth strategy

What does IPA say?

Targeting existing customers, in isolation, will not drive business growth. Breaking into new budgets at new customers, as well as nurturing existing customers, will maximise growth.

Loyalty and acquisition

While balance is recommended, there might be instances where your strategy requires a heavier focus on one over the other

Loyalty

New decision makers
in existing buying centres

New decision makers
in new buying centres

Acquisition

New logos
in existing industries

New logos
in new industries

Principle 1:

Sustain growth by leveraging both acquisition and customer growth strategies of marketers in Singapore believe that businesses grow best by increasing customer loyalty, not by increasing customer acquisition. However, this is impacting their ability to truly grow at the pace they need.

63%

The opportunity ahead

Invest in brand efforts to acquire new customers in addition to growing existing accounts

Why does this matter?

In Singapore today, 63% of marketers feel that businesses grow best by increasing customer loyalty, not increasing customer acquisition. However, industry research shows that you need to invest in both in order to grow. Marketers should consider how they can adjust initiatives to gain new customers by running brand campaigns.

2. What?

Awareness

Fame

Marketers need fame in order to be top of mind at every stage of the purchase funnel

What is fame?

Fame is "awareness at scale" — when everyone in the category has heard of your brand and thinks of it effortlessly in buying situations

What does IPA say?

Mental availability matters for B2B and B2C alike. Campaigns that aim to increase a firm's share of mind are most effective. The more famous they make the company, the better the business results.

Principle 2:

Strive for ad consistency, reach, and duration in order to achieve fame of marketers in Singapore run their brand campaigns for 6 months or less. However, Binet and Field's research shows that marketers need to allow their brand campaigns to run for more than 6 months before they can see impact.

76%

The opportunity ahead

Run brand campaigns with consistency, reach, and duration top of mind

Why does this matter?

76% of marketers in Singapore are running their brand campaigns for 6 months or less. Binet and Field's research shows that marketers need to allow their brand campaigns to run for more than 6 months in order to see impact.

3. When?

Short-Term

Long-Term

Whether your organisation is B2C or B2B, investment in short- and long-term campaigns will be critical for growth

B2C

B2B

What does IPA say?

Businesses need brand activity to create demand in the long-term, and activation to convert that demand efficiently into revenue in the short-term. When the balance is right, each effort should enhance the other.

Principle 3:

Invest in shorter-term demand generation efforts and longer-term brand campaigns to drive growth of marketing budget is allocated to brand marketing, on average, within B2B organisations in Singapore.

44%

The opportunity ahead

Apply the 50/50 rule as you consider the split between brand and demand investment

Why does this matter?

On average, 44% of B2B marketing budgets in Singapore is allocated to long-term brand investment, which is in line with the recommended allocation. Businesses need both kinds of marketing activity: brand activity to create demand, and activation to convert that demand efficiently into revenue. When the balance is right, each will enhance the other.

While marketers should invest in both short- and long-term marketing efforts, they should measure ROI over the full length of their sales cycle to most accurately capture investment impact

Marketer behaviours and beliefs of marketers in Singapore are measuring ROI of their investment within 3 months. Since the average sales cycle is 6 months, marketers need to slow down when it comes to measurement.

98%

4. Where?

Broad Targeting

Narrow Targeting

Targeting too narrowly might be ineffective as it ignores buying circles and future buyers

50% of working professionals in Singapore change jobs, companies, or industries at least once every 4 years

Buying Circles

Buyer

Buyer

Influencer

Influencer

Influencer

Future Buyers

Jr Assoc.

Assoc.

Mgr.

Principle 4:

Grow by reaching more customers than you currently have

Share of Voice > Share of Market
Brands Grow

Share of Voice < Share of Market
Brands Shrink

76%

of marketers in Singapore do not believe that broad targeting is more effective for their campaigns than hyper-targeting.

The opportunity ahead

Target broader audiences in order to reach the entire buying circle and future buyers

Why does this matter?

76% of marketers in Singapore do not believe that broad targeting is more effective than hyper-targeting. However, hyper-targeting often misses critical influencers in the buying circle and lacks the ability to nurture future buyers. We know that 6.8 people are typically involved in each B2B purchase decision. Consider expanding your reach beyond existing decision makers in order to create more opportunities for growth.

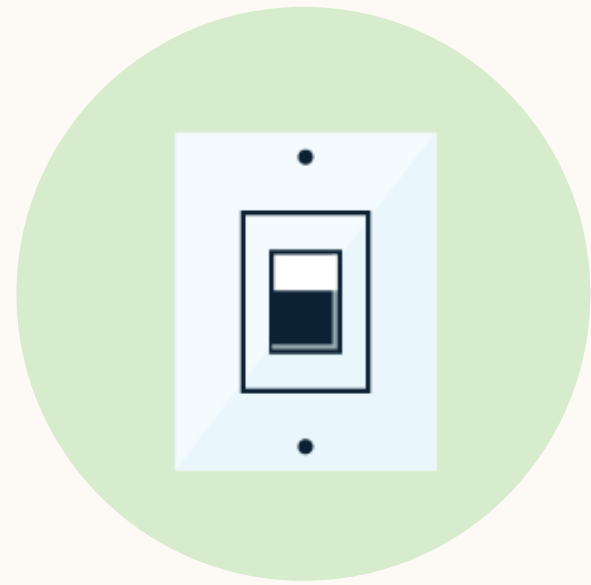

5. How?

Emotional

Rational

Buying decisions are both rational and emotional, so marketing should be too

Brand Effects

Demand Effects

What does IPA say?

Rational ads are more effective for in-market customers (the customers who will buy now). Emotional ads are more effective for out-of-market customers (the customers who will buy later).

Principle 5:

Balance the usage of rational and emotional ads to strategically build growth over time

5x

Marketers in Singapore are 5x more likely to produce rational ads vs. emotional ads, regardless of objective.

The opportunity ahead

Produce more emotional creative, particularly for upper funnel efforts, in order to reach out-of-market customers

Why does this matter?

Marketers in Singapore are 5x more likely to produce rational ads than emotional ads, but the rational approach won't always work for long-term brand building. In order to connect with buyers before they come to market, consider where and how emotional ads can be leveraged to drive business growth.

A successful balance of brand and demand marketing underlies these five principles of marketing growth

Balance investment in brand and demand

For more resources, visit LinkedIn Marketing Solutions

