7 TIPS FOR WRITING JOB POSTS THAT ATTRACT CANDIDATES

Powerful tactics backed by LinkedIn’s data, research, and original insights.
When you’re writing a job description, it’s easy to imagine your perfect candidate poring over every word and applying without hesitation. But you know that’s not how it works. Candidates skim, consider multiple jobs, and can miss important details buried in your job description.

LinkedIn can help you put your job post in front of relevant candidates – but the better your job description, the better your chance at getting that perfect candidate to apply.

Of course, creating a good job description can seem subjective. Everyone’s got advice, but it’s hard to know what really works.

That’s why these seven tips for effective job posts are all backed by data.

We analyzed the way millions of real members interact with job posts on LinkedIn and conducted a study to see what candidates look for in your job description.

We’ve boiled down the results into seven simple tips to help you make your job posts more effective.
KEEPI ICT CONCI SE

Job posts with 150 words or less got candidates to apply 17.8% more frequently than job posts with 450 to 600 words.

Less is more. Shorter job posts had a higher application rate than longer ones, according to LinkedIn’s behavioral data.

Keeping things concise helps candidates immediately get the info they need. And since more than 50% of job views on LinkedIn are on mobile devices, shorter descriptions are a better fit for modern candidates.

Takeaway
Write shorter job posts to get more applicants.
Candidates shown an extremely casual job description were 4x more likely to dislike the employer and 2x–4x less likely to apply.

We created three versions of a job description for the same mock job: a generic one, a formal one filled with business jargon, and a casual one with conversational language (plus a few jokes).

"I like the human tone, but I don’t like it getting too unprofessional ... I like to know that I am working with people, but I also want to know that they are capable professionals."

– Study participant

The very casual job description – which included terms like “kickass corporate manager” and silly hashtags like “#spreadsheets4life” – was worse at attracting people, according to our survey.

It’s good to be human and reflect your company culture. Just don’t go overboard if you want to attract the most applicants.

Takeaway

Don’t go overboard with a casual tone if you want to appeal to everyone.
LET CANDIDATES KNOW WHAT’S IN IT FOR THEM

Compensation, qualifications, and day-to-day details were highlighted as the most helpful parts of the job description.

At this stage, candidates may only spend a few seconds on your job description, so make sure you provide the information they’re looking for.

In our survey, candidates indicated that they want to know how much they’ll make, what kind of work they’ll be doing, and whether they’ll have a real shot at getting the job.

Put simply, candidates need to know if it’s worth investing more of their time. Once you’ve earned their attention with the right information, they’ll be eager to hear about everything else the role offers.

Takeaway
Focus on job details, requirements, and pay.
DON’T SPEND TOO MUCH TIME TALKING UP YOUR COMPANY

Candidates rated company, culture, and mission as less important, and rarely highlighted them as helpful.

Candidates do care about your company and culture – it’s just not what they’re looking for in the text of your job description. Many people in our study mentioned that they often look to get info on a company through its website, LinkedIn Company Page, or in interviews, rather than in the text of a job post.

You should make it easy for candidates to learn more about your company in places like your website or Company Page. When it comes to the limited real estate of your job post, however, focus on the job itself.

Takeaway
Don’t let your company become the focus of the job post.
Candidates found it extremely helpful to see specific metrics they should hit after one year on the job.

You don’t hire someone just for their education or experience. You hire them so they can get the job done. You’re looking for certain results, and candidates want to know what exactly those results are.

“The fact that the posting showed success criteria for the first year was impressive … I can’t recall ever seeing [that before]. That information is super helpful to me as a potential candidate so I can know what my targets are. But it also shows a level of seriousness that the company has defined that up front.”

– Study participant

Give explicit, measurable goals that the new hire will be expected to achieve. These performance goals were heavily highlighted and highly appreciated by candidates in our sample job posts.

Including these goals is an easy way to significantly improve and differentiate your job descriptions. Talk to stakeholders to generate realistic, concrete, and quantifiable achievements for your job post.

Takeaway

Set measurable performance goals.
6 GET YOUR JOB POST UP EARLY IN THE WEEK

Candidates view and apply most often on Mondays.

Posting your job early in the week may yield more applicants over the first few days. Most applications occur on Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, with just 15% coming in over the weekend.

So, if you’ve got your job post all queued up at 5:00 pm on Friday, don’t expect a tidal wave of applications. You’re likely to get far more candidates at the start of the work week.

Takeaway
Expect to get most applications in the first half of the work week.
USE GENDER-NEUTRAL WORDS FOR GREATER DIVERSITY

Men applied to jobs they viewed 13% more frequently than women.

That means there may be more female talent out there than your applicant pool suggests.

A study highlighted in the American Psychological Association’s Journal of Personality and Social Psychology found that job descriptions with masculine words made women less interested in applying, even though it didn’t make them feel less qualified. You can encourage more women to apply by avoiding terms like “strong,” “assertive,” and “ninja.” See the 2018 Ultimate Recruiting Toolbox for a handy list of biased words to avoid and some gender-neutral terms to replace them with.

Takeaway
Know that men tend to apply more readily than women.
SUMMING UP THE TIPS

1. Keep it concise
   Write shorter job posts to get more applicants.

2. Be careful of getting too casual
   Don’t go overboard with a casual tone if you want to appeal to everyone.

3. Let candidates know what’s in it for them
   Focus on job details, requirements, and pay.

4. Don’t spend too much time talking up your company
   Don’t let your company become the focus of the job post.

5. Define exactly what success looks like
   Set measurable performance goals.

6. Get your job post up early in the week
   Expect to get most applications in the first half of the work week.

7. Use gender-neutral words for greater diversity
   Know that men tend to apply more readily than women.
AND WHEN IT’S TIME TO POST YOUR JOB, CONSIDER LINKEDIN JOBS

You want to reach the right candidates, and LinkedIn can help. We’re the world’s largest professional network, with over 560 million members, most of whom you can’t find anywhere else.

LinkedIn Jobs helps you find the most relevant candidates by automatically targeting people based on skills, industry, experience, and interests – in emails and across LinkedIn. And if you’re planning to hire for multiple positions, LinkedIn Job Slots is a cost-effective way to swap in job posts throughout the year.

Hiring for one or two positions?
Post a job today with LinkedIn Job Posts

Always looking for new talent?
Request a free demo of LinkedIn Job Slots

LinkedIn Talent Solutions offers a full range of recruiting solutions to help organizations of all sizes find, attract, and engage the best talent.
We showed 450 members an example of a job description and asked them to highlight parts they found helpful, appealing, or would make them more likely to apply. Participants saw one of three mock job descriptions for the same fake job – these helpful heatmaps were the results.

APPENDIX: JOB DESCRIPTION HEATMAPS

A generic job description that is straightforward and plain

Business Manager in Manhattan, New York

Job description

We’re looking for an experienced Business Manager to lead a team of passionate employees.

The ACME Corporation isn’t just one of the world’s leading providers of healthy snack products—we’re a family of smart, hardworking professionals dedicated to making a difference. By producing fruit- and veggie-based snacks that are nutritious, delicious, and sustainably sourced, we help kids and adults live healthier lives.

A truly cross-functional role, the successful candidate will implement and oversee business initiatives across sales, operations, and marketing departments. Based in Midtown Manhattan, the office of 15 employees will look to you for strategic direction, tactical problem-solving, and personalized mentoring. The job is challenging, but rewarding; you’ll be expected to strategically drive revenue, improve customer satisfaction, and boost our reputation.

This role can be the launch pad of your career. You’ll be expected to continually develop and master new skills, and with the help of our executive coaching program, many Business Managers rise to become Directors and VPs within the ACME Corporation. The job comes with a generous salary and benefits, including health insurance, parental leave, paid representation for personal leave, and employees discounts for ACME products.

Responsibilities

- Lead a team of 15 direct reports, ensuring they meet their performance goals
- Develop and execute new strategies to succeed in increasingly changing markets
- Approve and monitor budget expenditures for maximum return-on-investment
- Report to the executive team on key business opportunities, risks, and needs
- Maintain and elevate the company’s reputation by representing us at key industry events
- At the end of your first year, success would mean increasing revenues by 7.5%, improving our customer satisfaction by 5.0%, and raising our Talent Brand Index score by 10%

Qualifications

- Strong computer management experience
- Proven track record of boosting revenue and running an efficient office
- Proven problem-solving skills
- Superior communication skills
- Proficiency in Microsoft Office suite

Preferred Qualifications

- MBA in business administration or finance
- Experience in a fast-paced marketing or advertising environment
- Ability to adapt and thrive in a rapidly shifting business landscape

---

A formal job description filled with business jargon and buzzwords

Business Manager

Job description

ACME Co. is seeking to hire an experienced Business Manager to run a corporate satellite office with 15 direct reports.

ACME is the world’s leading provider of healthy snack products. Our mission is to make the world a healthier place by providing nutritious, delicious fruit- and veggie-based snacks.

The successful candidate will be responsible for effectively managing business initiatives across sales, operations, and marketing departments.

The successful candidate will join the Midtown Manhattan office with maximum operational efficiency, ensuring all employees reach their KPIs. This business manager will be expected to increase revenue, improve customer NPS scores, and elevate our brand as an industry leader.

This role offers many opportunities for growth. ACME’s esteemed executive training program provides personal development courses to impart relevant skills and prepare managers for the next stage. The starting salary range for the role is $75,000 – $85,000, in addition to a benefits package, including health insurance, parental leave, multiple employee wellness programs, and more.

Responsibilities

- Management of a team of 15 direct reports, ensuring they meet their performance goals
- Development and execution of new strategies to succeed in increasingly changing markets
- Approval and oversight of budget expenditures for maximum return-on-investment
- Preparation of reports for the executive team on key business opportunities, risks, and requirements
- Maintenance and evolution of the company’s reputation through consistent messaging and marketing

Qualifications

- 5 years of corporate management experience
- Proven problem-solving abilities
- Superior communication skills
- Proficiency in Microsoft Office suite

Preferred Qualifications

- MBA and/or Bachelor’s degree in business, finance, or technology
- Proficiency in Spanish, French, German, or Mandarin
- Ability to adapt and thrive in a rapidly shifting business landscape

---

A casual job description with conversational language and a few jokes

Business Manager: Team Trailblazer, Choco Conqueror, Revenue Wrangler

Job description

We’re looking for you to become a team hero. You’ll define big revenue business goals. You’ll run an office as a well-oiled machine—without losing your cool.

You’ll be a perfect fit here at ACME. While we pride ourselves on healthy snack products—we’re not afraid of a little fun and mischief. We’ve got the team to back you up, and we’ll make sure you get the tools and support you need to keep them beamless.

As our newest Business Manager in our Manhattan office, you’ll be the one to pioneer innovative initiatives that will keep us at the forefront of the industry.\[

Once you’re hired, strap in for a super-high energy trajectory, with the help of our executive coaching program. You’re going to be an influencer and light the way for the next generation of ACME managers.\[

Responsibilities

- You’ll lead a team of 15 direct reports and help them hone their skills
- You’ll look for new ways to grow our business and use those strategies to its advantage
- You’ll define the team’s budget to let the most bang for your buck
- You’ll take a hands-on approach to solving problems, and we’re not afraid of a little hard work
- You’ll look for ways to add value and improve our processes—always looking for ways to share your knowledge and leadership abilities
- You’ll also organize the annual office holiday event (so they say, with great power comes great responsibility)

Qualifications

- You’ve earned your stripes as a kickass corporate manager for at least 5 years
- You’ve got the knack for tackling challenges others throw down on their doorstep
- You’ve got the green light to break new ground in the snack industry
- You’re fluent in English
- You’re super-cool to throw in a bit of marketing mix

Preferred: Perfect-World Qualifications

- You’ve got an MBA in business, finance, or technology
- You’re a world-class problem solver
- You’re fluent in Spanish, French, German, or Mandarin
- You’re a quick study and you can learn in English
- You’re super-cool to throw in a bit of marketing mix
METHODOLOGY

For LinkedIn’s behavioral insights, referenced in tips #1, #6, and #7: We analyzed about 4.5 million jobs posted in 2016 and 2017 in the United States and the United Kingdom. Gender was inferred by name. Stats cited in #1 and #7 are based on comparisons of application-to-view rates, which are percentages of how many jobs candidates apply for out of all those they view.

For LinkedIn’s heat map study, referenced in tips #2, #3, #4, and #5: We surveyed 450 members from the LinkedIn Market Research community (in partnership with Vision Critical) comprising LinkedIn members across industries, job functions, and career stage. Participants saw one of three job descriptions (generic, formal, or casual) and were asked to highlight parts they found helpful, appealing, or would make them more likely to apply. Participants saw and highlighted the text of the job descriptions only.