Introduction

Whether you’re a five-person startup or a Fortune 500 organization, talent is a top priority. Your success as a business and as a recruiter is directly linked to your ability to hire great people.

But increasingly, you don’t pick talent. Talent picks you. It’s a candidate’s marketplace, where talent has greater access to information, more paths to explore job opportunities, and benefits from fierce competition for skilled hires. Employers around the world are feeling the impact – with 38% reporting talent shortages in 2015¹ and less than 1 in 5 employees² planning to stay with their current employer in the long term. On top of all this, the gig economy and rise of the Millennial workforce are re-writing the rules of employment as we know them.

These changes require a new approach to talent acquisition. We need to understand how professionals make career decisions and find opportunities to engage them throughout their candidate journey.

This ebook will cover how you can build and nurture relationships with talent in order to move them closer to the Holy Grail – becoming engaged hires. It will also outline how LinkedIn helps you find, prioritize, and engage the right talent at the right time.

Let’s get started.

Why LinkedIn?

LinkedIn is where 414+ million professionals from around the world come to connect, stay informed, and get hired. It’s the largest and fastest-growing social network for professionals.

Every day, billions of interactions take place on the platform. Members update their professional profiles with new skills, recommendations, education and work experiences. They also build relationships with companies by connecting to employees, engaging with content, and following Company Pages.

LinkedIn Talent Solutions is a suite of tools that helps you make sense of these interactions. It can support you in finding the candidates you need, building and maintaining relationships, and converting those relationships into long-lasting hires.
The Candidate's Journey
The stages of the candidate journey

People move through the candidate journey at their own pace. Some learn about an organization quickly, develop an affinity after one interaction, and apply to an open job within weeks. Others linger in the attraction stage for months or even years before considering a career move.

But you’ve got jobs to fill. Fortunately, there are concrete steps you can take to help move candidates through the stages faster. By staying top of mind, nurturing your relationships with candidates along the way, and using insights from LinkedIn to identify talent most likely to consider you as their next employer, you’ll be set up for recruiting success.

STAGES

Discovery

The candidate is open to new opportunities and beginning to discover what makes your company unique.

“I wonder what this company is all about …”

Attraction

The candidate is forming opinions and associations with your company. In other words, building a relationship with your brand.

“I think I could like working here …”

Application

The candidate has decided to spend the time and energy to apply to your open role.

Engagement

Keep new hires happy and engaged as employees, fueling your talent brand and referral efforts.

“I can see growing my career with this company.”
Show your organization is a great place to work

Candidates in the discovery stage are aware of your organization, but they aren’t thinking about job opportunities just yet. Before they can picture you as their next employer, they need to learn more about you, your organization, and start building trust and affinity.

By investing in your professional and employer brand, you can raise awareness and open the door for employment discussions down the road. It has real bottom-line impact too; organizations with strong employer brands spend less on hiring and have better employee retention.

Make yourself and your company known. Your personal brand matters because you’re a representative of your organization, so let’s start with you.
Make your profile more authentic

Your LinkedIn profile reflects who you are professionally. Visiting profiles is the #1 activity on LinkedIn, which means your profile is often the first thing candidates see. It’s also usually a first stop for prospective candidates who want to learn about your organization.

That’s why you have to nail it.

It comes down to authenticity. By communicating your values, experiences, goals, and personality in an authentic way, you’ll set the stage for strong relationships with candidates.

If you can’t, you’ll lose talent to recruiters who can.

4 tips for a more authentic LinkedIn profile

1. Choose your best photo. Profiles with photos are 14x more likely to be viewed. Four things you should do:
   - Choose a photo that looks like you
   - Make your face at least 60% of the picture
   - Wear your normal work clothes
   - Smile

2. Write a bolder headline. While your picture is your visual hook, your headline is your written hook. Rather than defaulting to your standard title, use your headline to share what makes you unique. Don’t be afraid to get creative: Headlines can be great conversation-starters with candidates.

Over-invest in your summary. Your profile summary is the place to showcase your career story, your recruiting passion, and your reasons for working at your company. By sharing who you are and what your company offers, talent will be more likely to engage with you about their career goals.

Not sure what to write? Four questions to guide you:

- What do you do professionally?
- Why do you do what you do?
- What’s unique about you or your company that you can offer candidates?
- What do you want candidates to do after reading your summary?

HINT: Inviting them to connect and start a dialogue is a great way to wrap up your summary.

Be a thought leader by sharing and publishing content. Curating existing content can be less time-intensive than creating original content. Use SlideShare and LinkedIn Pulse to discover quality content quickly, and use status updates to share with your network.

When you’ve got something to say, writing posts is a great way to show your thought leadership and expertise to candidates and other professionals. LinkedIn is one of the fastest-growing publishing platforms in the world.

Why publish on LinkedIn?

Publishing on LinkedIn is a great way to build your professional brand. The more quality and relevant posts you publish, the more people you’ll reach and the stronger your brand will become. Writing about your organization’s culture and accomplishments can help you build your personal and employer brands at the same time.

3M posts/to date
making LinkedIn one of the fastest growing platforms for professional publishing in the world.

The average post reaches professionals in 21 industries across 9 countries.

Members are generating more likes, comments, and shares on their posts than ever before.

Traffic per post is up 150%.

230M members
can publish professional content on LinkedIn, right now.

150K+ posts/week
Professionals are publishing content everyday on topics from real estate to construction, to education and law.

500 influencers
Talent acquisition leaders like J.T. O’Donnell, Liz Ryan, Ed Nathanson and Lou Adler are all using LinkedIn to share what they know.
3 steps to publishing success

1. Get inspired. See why other LinkedIn members publish on LinkedIn. Download the Pulse app for Android or iOS to stay on top of talent acquisition news while you’re on the go.

2. Write. Everyone has their own writing process. Do what works for you, but remember these four tips:
   - Write what you know about and/or are passionate about.
   - Write with your candidate audience in mind.
   - Get feedback on your draft from at least one other person.
   - Proofread, proofread, and proofread again.

3. Publish. Visit here or click "Publish a post" on your desktop homepage to go live.
Set up your Career Page to stand out

Just as your profile helps talent learn about you, your LinkedIn Career Page helps candidates learn about your company as an employer. It is where you can own your organization’s authentic story and give candidates a compelling window into life as an employee.

You likely already have a Company Page on LinkedIn (if you don’t, you can set one up for free). The next step is a premium Career Page that lets you target your messaging and posted jobs to candidates based on attributes like location, industry and function.

4 steps to gaining quality followers

1. Add a free Follow button to your site. Make it easy for people who visit your website to follow your Company Page by embedding a free Follow button.

2. Go social. Cross-promote your Company Page in LinkedIn Groups and on other social platforms such as Twitter and Facebook.

3. Have employees spread the word. Ask your team to include your Company Page on their LinkedIn profiles and in all candidate communications. They can even embed a Follow button in their email signatures.

4. Track your progress. Use the Analytics tab on your Company Page to explore your follower demographics by function, industry, seniority, and company size. You can also see how many of your followers are current employees. Use this information to determine whether you’re attracting the right talent and how to better engage this audience.

Now that your target candidates are aware of you as an employer, it’s time for you to nurture those budding relationships and move candidates along their journey to becoming your next hires.

To do this, stay top-of-mind, be helpful, and harness the mutual connections that already have a trusted relationship with your target talent: your employees.
Reach candidates with Status Updates and Sponsored Updates

Candidates are busy, and with so much happening on LinkedIn every day, it’s important to get your best content in front of the right talent to have the biggest impact.

Status Updates are the perfect tool to:

- Show you’re a strategic partner. By hooking candidates with valuable content that helps them in their careers, they’ll be more likely to rely on you for guidance and job leads.

- Make you visible and accessible. Status updates are a non-invasive way to stay top of mind. Be patient: it may take a while to get a potential candidate on board. Win their attention and loyalty now; hire them later.

- Extend your reach. The more likes, comments and shares your content receives, the more broadly it reaches throughout the LinkedIn network. Take advantage of your employees’ established relationships with talent by making it easy for them to share your content.

Status updates containing links can have up to 45% higher follower engagement than updates without links.

3 tips for winning Status Updates

1. Post often. Start with one post per weekday and work up to 2-3 times per weekday. Posting consistently keeps your content fresh and gives your followers something to share with their networks. Quality rules over quantity, so only increase your frequency if your quality stay strong.

   Consider building an editorial calendar to plan your posts and ensure your content mix is relevant to the talent segments you want to engage.

2. Be responsive. Always reply to comments and questions on your updates. Consider connecting and/or engaging with people who share and like your updates too. Remember, these social actions signal interest in your organization, so don’t leave anyone hanging.

3. Value quality over quantity. Your Career Page helps you pipeline prospective talent, so always post content that reflects your brand and attracts the people you’re looking to hire.

5 ideas for engaging Status Updates

- Press articles showcasing your company’s milestones
- Photos that capture how your employees have fun on the job
- SlideShare that sums up your company culture and values
- Celebrations of your employees’ successes
- Open job opportunities
Engage the candidates you’re looking for with Sponsored Updates

Sponsored Updates allow you to reach beyond your followers to LinkedIn’s 414+ million members and share content straight to any member’s feed. Target updates by job title, industry, seniority, field of study, and skills, nurturing the relationships most valuable to you.

For example, if your organization is hosting an engineering hackathon, sponsor an update to engineering majors at nearby universities, spreading the news beyond your followers.

Sponsored Updates are the best way to share information with the people who will care.
Sponsored Updates are data-rich. Each one comes with its own dashboard showing impressions, clicks, interactions, the number of new followers acquired from the update, and the engagement percentage.

Pro tip: Use these insights to understand what content resonates with your target candidates. Then, sponsor more content like it. Every interaction with your brand builds the relationship.

These analytics help you control cost and show the overall effectiveness of a post. Below are a few key definitions.

- Impressions: The number of times your update is seen. Each time an update displays in the newsfeed, it counts as one impression.

- Engagement: The number of clicks to your update link, as well as likes/shares/comments/followers acquired, divided by impressions.

By sponsoring this update to a wider audience, this organization attracted 136 new followers.
Make it easy for employees to share content with LinkedIn Elevate

Your employees are already connected to a diverse, qualified pool of candidates. On average, a company’s employees have 10 times as many connections as a company has followers. With LinkedIn Elevate, employees get a steady stream of quality content to share across LinkedIn, Twitter, and Facebook – helping to influence all of the potential hires in their networks.

You can easily measure Elevate’s impact. You can see who your most social employees are and track engagement over time and learn what content types drives job views, Company Page followers, and hires.

On average, Elevate users:
- Share 4x more than before
- Drive 40% more followers
- Drive 3x more job views

People are 3X more likely to believe employees over CEOs when it comes to talking about an organization’s work environment.

Companies with socially engaged employees are 58% more likely to attract top talent and 20% more likely to retain that talent.1

Target your employees’ connections with Recruitment Ads

The people who view your employees’ profiles are connected to your employees, and therefore more likely to be familiar with your organization and more open to your opportunities.

Capture the attention of this talent by placing ads alongside your employees’ profiles. Here are four good options.

- Work with us at Company X
  - Display a targeted set of job openings

- Picture yourself at Company X
  - Invite candidates to picture themselves working at your company

- Follow Company X
  - Encourage viewers to follow your Company Page and stay informed

- Internal Hiring
  - Advertise open roles to your own employees
Match the right candidate with the right opportunity

By now, candidates are aware of your brand and have developed an interest in your organization. You’ve laid the groundwork for them to apply to your job.

The keys to success at this stage are starting InMail conversations that get responses and writing job descriptions that inspire the right talent to apply.

Candidates are more familiar with you now, so it’s easier for them to determine cultural fit and get motivated to apply.
Write InMails that hook candidates

InMail allows you to send direct messages to anyone on LinkedIn. But eliciting a response takes skill. The key to getting a response is to have a personalized message, but that can be difficult when you’re strapped for time.

70% of talent on LinkedIn are passive candidates. They are not actively searching for a job but would be open to a new opportunity if they felt it was the right fit.

Take advantage of LinkedIn’s insights to identify the talent most likely to respond to you. Consider your Career Page followers and employees’ connections. Look at people who share your LinkedIn Groups, schools and past employers.

(LinkedIn Recruiter makes it easy to find talent most likely to be receptive to your outreach, but more on that later.)

1 Talent Trends 2015
9 golden rules of InMail

1. Review profile. Let the recipient know what on their profile caught your eye. Personalization is flattering.

2. Grab attention. Mention mutual connections. LinkedIn suggests them for you.

3. Show you are selective. Highlight what makes them appealing. Compliment them sincerely.

4. Be conversational and brief. Write as if you were speaking. Don’t just paste the job description.

5. Listen well. Ask about goals and interest level in new opportunities.

6. Focus on goals. Think beyond the job and frame your message around what’s in it for them.

7. Leverage content. Consider including useful information, such as a relevant whitepaper.

8. Be patient. Don’t hound. Use status updates to stay visible while you wait for responses.

9. Include a call to action. Ask to continue the dialogue, not necessarily to apply right away.

Post Jobs that excite the right candidates

A successful job posting has a tall order to fill. It must communicate job qualifications and required skills. It also needs to convey your company culture, delight readers, stand out from the competition, and persuade candidates to apply. Ultimately, it should attract the right candidates and deter the wrong ones.

On LinkedIn, your opportunities reach far beyond those looking for a new job. We use our unique profile insights to help your opportunities reach and engage qualified talent throughout their candidate journey.
5 steps to an apply-worthy job description

Your job description only has a few moments to make a big impression. Follow these 5 guidelines to make it count.

1. Use a search-friendly job title rather than a creative one. Make sure your job title is easily discoverable, and save your creativity for the description. People are much more likely to search for a “Sales Manager” than a “Revenue Ninja.”

2. Get smart on the latest research. There is so much research on what candidates want in a job today, so use it. For example, LinkedIn Talent Trends 2015 found that professionals in the UK value work/life balance more than professionals in other parts of the world.

3. Be personal and specific. Beyond skills and experiences, think about the type of person you’re looking to attract (personality traits, interests, values, etc).

4. Emphasize what’s in it for the candidate. The job description is for candidates. Rather than outline your laundry list of needs, sell them on how they will have impact and career growth.

5. Get creative. Keep your job posts unique by seeking out inspiration in unexpected places. L’Oreal noticed the popularity of emojis and decided to ask candidates to describe their dream job using only emojis.

The power of a LinkedIn Job Post

2. Engage the right talent, automatically. You want your job to reach the right candidates, not just those actively looking. That’s why we automatically advertise your openings to relevant professionals based on the qualifications you’re looking for.

Your target talent may see your LinkedIn Job Post at multiple touch points—as they browse their newsfeeds, view profiles or check email.

3. Highlight your culture and employees. When candidates self-select for culture fit before applying, it saves time for everyone. They want to know, “What is it like to work there? Whom do I know who works there? Who might my future coworkers be?”

How LinkedIn Job Posts help you answer their questions:

• Show your culture by seamlessly integrating your Career Page content
• Encourage referrals by highlighting people the candidate already knows at your organization
• Reveal future colleagues by showing profiles of employees already in that role

1 Talent Trends 2015
Once you have new hires, empowering them with new skills and growth opportunities is a great way to keep them happy and engaged. If they are continually learning and taking on more responsibilities, they’re more likely to be satisfied.

Your engaged employees are your best recruiting resource. They embody your company values and can help attract people who are also good cultural fits. If you can make referring new talent easy for them, it’s a win for you both.

64% of in-house talent professionals are interested in increasing employee retention.¹

STAGE FOUR: ENGAGEMENT

Motivate and retain your new hires

Empower employees with new skills and growth opportunities

Fun perks and a great culture can lure talent through the door, but top hires usually need more incentive to stick around for the long term. Quality employees are eager to learn new skills, take on more responsibility, and progress in their careers.

The key to employee loyalty is engagement. Engaged employees have a strong sense of purpose. They believe in their work, their supervisors, and their organizations.

23% of employees voluntarily leave their jobs due to lack of development and training.

$3,400 for every $10,000
The cost in annual salary that disengaged employees can cost an organization.
4 ways to engage and retain employees with learning:

- Make learning a priority. Learning isn’t a one-time event. Companies need to focus on creating a culture that encourages employees to make learning a daily habit.

- Invest in professional development. When employees believe you are invested in their careers, they become more personally invested in your organization.

- Build leaders from within. Support employees who aspire to be in leadership roles by investing in leadership and management training.

- Provide guided career coaching. Use online learning to help employees develop their goals and career paths, and provide supervisors with the coaching insights needed to mentor employees.

Turbo-charge your employee referral program

87% of recruiters say the best channel to recruit quality candidates is employee referrals, yet only 20% are satisfied with their level of employee engagement in their referral programs.¹ Why don’t more employees participate?

Getting employees to refer others can be hard. Employees need to know the open roles, remember who’s in their networks, and be willing to navigate referral software. Once they’ve made a referral, they’re often left in the dark about their referral’s status.

The organizations who crack the code on employee participation in referral programs will have a huge advantage. Referrals are consistently a cheaper, faster, and higher-quality source of hire.

STAGE FOUR: ENGAGEMENT

Make it easy for employees to refer great talent with LinkedIn Referrals

Your employees are connected to talented people, but asking them to spend their time and energy helping you recruit won’t always work. For a referral program to be successful, it has to be simple and rewarding for participants.

LinkedIn Referrals does just that: It makes automatic referral recommendations to your employees. It searches their networks and finds quality leads for your open roles.

Employees like it because they can see where their referrals are in the recruiting process.

LinkedIn Referrals syncs with your existing recruiting tools so you can get your referred candidates into your applicant tracking system without learning new processes.

Spotlights with LinkedIn Recruiter

Recruiter gives you actionable insights in the form of Spotlights, which streamline your sourcing experience by identifying quality candidates, faster.

- Company connections: People who are connected with people at your company
- Past applicants: People who have applied to your company before
- Engaged with your talent brand: People who have engaged with your Company Page, status updates, or Job Posts
- Competitor’s talent pools: People your competitors target, including those affiliated with the schools or companies from which they tend to recruit
- Potentially ready for a move: People who have been in their current role for 1-5 years
- Have recruiting activity: People who have been contacted or engaged by recruiters at your company

Company connections are 1.5x more likely to accept your InMail

People who are engaged with your talent brand are 2x more likely to accept your InMail

More tenured people are less likely to accept your InMail, but those who do are more likely to consider the open position.
